We Are Family

"Building community is a huge goal for me each school year. I want my students to feel as if they are part of a close-knit family when they are in my classroom. To help students get to know each other and really feel as though they are brothers and sisters, I ask them to bring a baby picture to school on the first day. I request that they put it in an envelope so that other classmates do not see the picture. I then create a bulletin board in our classroom entitled "Who's That Baby?" Each baby picture is on the board along with a number. After the pictures are up for a week or so, students are given a blank sheet of paper. They number the paper and try to guess each baby. It is fun for the students, and it creates a sense of family to have all of their baby pictures hanging in our classroom."
